

THE ROLE OF POLYSEMANIC WORDS IN SPEECH

Bozorov Behruz Ilhom o‘g‘li

Turin politexnika universiteti akademik litseyi

Ona tili va adabiyot fani o‘qituvchisi

Abstract

This scientific article presents ideas and observations about the use of polysemantic words in speech.

Keywords: Language, morphology, polysemantic, speech, style, society, principle, linguistics.

Introduction

Language is the distinguishing mark of a nation as a nation, its priceless wealth, the most powerful means of preserving and enriching material and spiritual heritage, the basis of human society, one of the most important principles of state independence. The farther the history of a nation goes, the more ancient the language is. Language has existed since ancient times, and as long as there is a nation, it will also survive. In the short term, new states may appear on the world map, but never in a day or in a century will a new language emerge. A person's language determines which nationality he belongs to, and what region he or she is from.

In the modern and fast-paced world, specific changes are taking shape in all spheres of society, as well as in the social condition of the language. The lightening of human life, the rapid development of time in the "quick and easy" formula also show a desire for ease in the use of language. Achieving consistency and optimality is a primary factor, especially when it comes to the use of language in speech.

Polysemantic words are words that have several interrelated meanings in linguistics. For example, the word "eye" is used in various senses, such as a human body, an "eye" of water (a spring), and a stone in a ring. This disambiguation page lists articles associated with the title Disambiguation.

People interact in the process of verbal speech, where they use one word to more than one meaning, resulting in words with many meanings. Jump to search But it would not be possible for all the concrete names in life to absorb them separately and grow up. Each word usually appears as a term of subject, character, and then is examined into other types of subjects, characters. A name given to a subject and a thing is based on one of the characters in that subject or event when it gives a name to a subject and an event. Jump to search

Properties of polysemantic words:

Having more than one meaning: All polysemantic words have more than one meaning.

Relation of meanings: Different meanings of such words do not depend on each other, but have some kind of semantic connection to each other.

The role of the text: The meaning in which the word is used is determined by the text. Jump to search

How are polysemantic words formed?

Jump to navigation

This disambiguation page lists articles associated with the title Disambiguation.

Word Formation:

Disambiguation pages with disambiguation pages

The vocabulary composition of any natural language is dynamic and changing, which is constantly updated and enriched by the master of the language. The bulk of the vocabulary is made up of various lexical units, including polysemantic words. Polysemy (polysemy) is one of the important phenomena of linguistics, which refers to the ability of words to express several but interrelated meanings. Because polysemantic words have different meanings in different contexts, their analysis is important not only from the point of view of lexicology, but also from the perspective of semantics, translation theory, psycholinguistics, and pragmatics. The phenomenon of polysemy is observed in all languages of the world, and its formation depends on various factors.

There are many works devoted to the study of the peculiarities of polysemantic words in Uzbek linguistics. Among them are the works of S. Usmanov, M. Sodikova, T. Alikulov, D. H. Bazarova, M. Mirtojiev, M. Hakimova, B. Suyunov, G. Roziqova, Sh. Makhmaraimova and S. Rakhimova. This disambiguation page lists articles associated with the title Disambiguation. The thesis of T. Alikulov can be cited as one of the first works on the study of polysemimy. Jump to search The thesis is mainly a study of the formation of lexical meanings that give rise to polysemantic words related to the noun category. Jump to search T. Alikulov shows that only figurative meaning is formed as a phenomenon that causes polysemy.

Polysemanticism is the most compact and convenient way to store information about the universe in a language. This disambiguation page lists articles associated with the disambiguation page. For example, is it possible to name the whole universe and our imaginations about it with the existing sound in the Uzbek language and their various combinations? Of course, polysemisy occurs as a natural phenomenon in this place. That is, different but interrelated phenomena are named with one character." Disambiguation pages with short descriptions

Jump to search

It seems that the Uzbek language is rich in formed and multi-meaning words that creates a convenient opportunity for the formation of word games. In particular, the use of linguistic units in figurative meanings in addition to their meaning, relying on the subtleties of figurative words and using them as a methodological tool in speech will be of great importance in creating a funny situation.

References

1. Сайфуллаева Р., Менглиев Б., Бокиева Г., Қурбонова М., Юнусова З., Абузалова М. Ҳозирги ўзбек тили.- Т., 2007.- Б.119
2. M.T.Iriskulov. Introduction to Linguistics. T., "New Age Generation". 2009. B-12.
3. Mirtozhiev M. Uzbek tilida polysemy. – Tashkent: "Ўқитувчи", 1984. – B. 6
4. Muminov A. Polysemy and Homonymy II: Issues of Language and Literature. Part 2. - Dushanbe: TSU. 1975. Pp. 268-275 (in Tajik)
5. Розиқова Г.З Ўзбек тилида синтактик полисемия. Филол. фан. номз. дисс. Фарғона 1999. – Б. 79
6. Ҳожиев А. Ўзбек тилшунослигининг долзарб муаммолари // Ўзбек тили ва адабиёти.- 2007.-№ 1.- Б.7.