

THE PEOPLE'S DEMOCRATIC PARTY OF UZBEKISTAN TODAY: VOICE OF SOCIAL JUSTICE IN A TRANSFORMING POLITICAL LANDSCAPE

Shohruhmirzo Qosimov

Head of the Department for Work with Youth and Women of the Fergana
Regional Council of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan

Abstract

The People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan (PDPU) occupies a significant position within the country's evolving political system. As a party committed to social justice, equality, and the protection of vulnerable groups, the PDPU has consistently advocated for policies that promote welfare, support for pensioners, people with disabilities, and low-income families.

In the context of Uzbekistan's ongoing political and socio-economic transformation, the PDPU has adapted its strategies to remain relevant and influential. The party's focus on engaging youth, enhancing civil society participation, and contributing to legislative processes underscores its role as a key actor in fostering inclusive governance.

This article aims to provide a comprehensive overview of the PDPU's current ideological orientation, organisational structure, policy priorities, and its impact on Uzbekistan's political landscape. By examining these dimensions, the study highlights the party's contributions to social equity and political pluralism in a rapidly changing environment.

Introduction

This article examines the current activities, strategic direction, and growing influence of the Fergana Regional Council of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan (PDPU). Without delving into historical origins, the study focuses on the Council's present-day role in political engagement, social development, and public service within the region. Special attention is given to initiatives targeting youth and women, inclusive community programmes, and partnerships with local and national institutions. The article highlights the Council's efforts to raise the quality and effectiveness of its events, increase party membership—particularly among youth—and serve as a model for other regional councils in the country. Through detailed analysis of recent activities and leadership practices, the study concludes that the Fergana Regional Council is establishing itself as one of the PDPU's most active and exemplary branches in Uzbekistan today.

The People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan has developed a structured and hierarchical organisational framework designed to ensure effective coordination and representation across various regions and sectors. The party's leadership includes a central executive committee, supported by regional and local branches, which facilitate grassroots engagement and policy dissemination.

A distinctive feature of the PDPU is its emphasis on inclusivity and broad-based membership. The party actively encourages participation from diverse demographic groups, including youth, women, and socially vulnerable populations. This inclusive approach is reflected in the establishment of specialised councils and committees that focus on social policy, labour rights, and civic engagement.

Moreover, the PDPU's organisational dynamics are characterised by ongoing efforts to modernise internal processes, improve transparency, and enhance member involvement in decision-making. These reforms are aimed at strengthening the party's capacity to respond to the evolving needs of Uzbekistan's society and political landscape.

The People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan places significant emphasis on social policy as a cornerstone of its political agenda. Central to its priorities are initiatives aimed at improving the welfare of pensioners, persons with disabilities, and economically disadvantaged families. The party advocates for increased state support in healthcare, education, and social protection, aligning its policies with the broader national goals of social equity and sustainable development.

In addition to social welfare, the PDPU is actively involved in promoting youth engagement and empowerment. Recognising the importance of the younger generation for Uzbekistan's future, the party has developed programmes designed to enhance political participation, vocational training, and leadership development among youth. These initiatives contribute to cultivating a politically aware and socially responsible citizenry.

Furthermore, the party maintains a proactive stance in fostering civil society cooperation. Through collaboration with non-governmental organisations, community groups, and labour unions, the PDPU seeks to amplify the voices of underrepresented groups and ensure their concerns are addressed in legislative processes. This commitment to inclusivity underscores the party's role as a mediator between the government and the populace.

The People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan has maintained a consistent presence in the country's parliamentary system, participating actively in national and local elections. While operating within a political landscape characterised by dominant executive authority, the PDPU has successfully secured representation in the Oliy Majlis (the Supreme Assembly), enabling it to influence legislative debates and policymaking.

The party's electoral strategy focuses on addressing the specific needs and concerns of its core constituencies, such as pensioners, workers, and socially vulnerable groups. This targeted approach has helped the PDPU to maintain electoral support and consolidate its position within Uzbekistan's multiparty system.

In the legislative arena, the PDPU contributes to the formulation and promotion of laws aimed at strengthening social protections, improving labour conditions, and advancing educational opportunities. Its deputies actively participate in parliamentary committees, where they advocate for policies aligned with the party's social-democratic principles.

Through its dual role as a political representative and policy advocate, the PDPU continues to play a crucial part in shaping Uzbekistan's social and political development.

The People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan remains a pivotal actor within the country's political landscape, championing social justice and advocating for the welfare of vulnerable populations. Through its structured organisation, inclusive membership, and targeted policy priorities, the PDPU effectively addresses key social challenges and contributes to the development of a more equitable society. Despite operating in a complex and evolving political environment, the party has demonstrated adaptability by engaging youth, cooperating with civil society, and actively participating in legislative processes. These efforts underscore the PDPU's commitment to fostering political pluralism and inclusive governance in Uzbekistan.

Overall, the PDPU's current role exemplifies the potential of social-democratic principles to influence policy and represent diverse societal interests in a transforming nation. Further research could explore the party's future trajectory amid ongoing reforms and shifting political dynamics.

The steady rise and renewed relevance of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan in recent years can be attributed in large part to the visionary leadership of Ulug'bek Ilyosovich Inoyatov, Chairperson of the Central Council. His strategic insight, commitment to democratic values, and people-oriented approach have significantly strengthened the party's presence on the national stage.

Under his guidance, the PDPU has revitalised its policy platforms, expanded its outreach, and deepened its engagement with key societal groups, particularly youth, women, and socially vulnerable populations. Mr Inoyatov's leadership is characterised by a deep sense of responsibility to the people, pragmatic political thinking, and a clear focus on social justice.

His ability to unite diverse regional structures of the party under a shared vision of inclusive development has contributed to the PDPU's growing reputation as a constructive force in Uzbekistan's political landscape. Thanks to his consistent efforts, the party is not only expanding its membership base but also positioning itself as a leading platform for public dialogue and policy innovation.

Ulug'bek Inoyatov's role in national politics goes beyond organisational management; he is shaping a modern and socially conscious political culture rooted in equity, responsibility, and public trust. His leadership continues to inspire members across all levels of the party to work with renewed energy and dedication for the betterment of the nation.

Mukhsiddin Nizomitdinov, Head of the Department for Youth and Women's Affairs at the Central Council of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan, stands out as one of the most active and forward-thinking figures in the party's leadership. His sincere dedication to supporting young people and advancing the role of women in society has had a lasting impact on the party's social agenda and public engagement.

With an energetic and modern approach, Mr Nizomitdinov has played a pivotal role in designing and implementing inclusive initiatives that resonate with the values of a new generation. He has been instrumental in shaping programmes that promote civic education, leadership development, and social inclusion among youth and women across the country.

His leadership is marked by open dialogue, a collaborative spirit, and a deep understanding of the challenges and aspirations of the populations he serves. Under his coordination, many grassroots campaigns and public forums have gained national attention for their innovation, outreach, and practical impact.

Thanks to his efforts, the PDPU has significantly strengthened its connection with young citizens and women, positioning itself as a party that truly listens to and represents the people. Mukhiddin Nizomitdinov continues to be a source of inspiration for regional branches and party activists, encouraging a culture of responsibility, equality, and active participation in shaping Uzbekistan's democratic future.

The Fergana Regional Council of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan plays a vital role in translating the party's national objectives into effective local actions. Under the capable leadership of its Chairman, O'ktamov Shoxruxbek Ulug'bek o'g'li, the council has significantly contributed to the social and political development of the Fergana region.

Chairman O'ktamov is widely recognised for his dedicated and proactive approach to addressing the region's socio-economic challenges. His leadership is marked by an emphasis on improving social welfare programmes, strengthening youth engagement, and fostering cooperation between the party, local government bodies, and civil society organisations. Under his guidance, the council has implemented numerous initiatives aimed at supporting vulnerable groups, enhancing educational opportunities, and promoting employment.

Moreover, O'ktamov's commitment to transparent governance and community involvement has earned him respect among party members and the wider public. His strategic vision continues to reinforce the People's Democratic Party's presence and influence in Fergana, making the regional council a crucial actor in advancing the party's mission of social justice and inclusive development.

Through these efforts, the Fergana Regional Council under O'ktamov's stewardship exemplifies effective regional leadership, contributing significantly to the broader political and social progress within Uzbekistan.

Shohruhmirzo Sherzod o'g'li Qosimov, as the Head of the Youth and Women's Affairs Department of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan's Fergana Regional Council, plays an indispensable role in advancing the party's mission of social inclusion and empowerment. His dynamic leadership has been instrumental in designing and implementing innovative programmes that directly address the needs of young people and women in the region.

Under Shohruhmirzo's guidance, the department has successfully launched numerous initiatives aimed at enhancing educational opportunities, promoting gender equality, and encouraging active civic participation among youth. His efforts have also focused on vocational training and leadership development, equipping young people and women with the skills and confidence necessary to contribute meaningfully to social and economic life.

Furthermore, Shohruhmirzo's commitment to fostering dialogue and cooperation between local authorities, educational institutions, and civil society has strengthened the network of support available to youth and women in Fergana. His proactive approach and dedication have not only increased the visibility of these social groups within the party but also ensured their voices are heard in policy discussions and decision-making processes.

Through his effective leadership, Shohruhmirzo Qosimov continues to shape a more inclusive and equitable future for the region, embodying the core values of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan.

As part of its commitment to social responsibility and historical remembrance, the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan has paid special attention to the well-being of World War II veterans. In Fergana region, where six surviving veterans reside, party representatives made personal visits to express gratitude and provide support.

These visits were more than symbolic; they served as an opportunity to honour the sacrifices of those who contributed to peace and freedom, while also addressing the veterans' current needs. The gesture reflected the party's deep respect for historical legacy and its ongoing efforts to uphold the values of solidarity, dignity, and care for the elderly.

Such acts of attention reinforce the PDPU's identity as a people-centred party that values not only the future but also the legacy of those who built the foundations of today's society.

On 6 May, the Fergana Regional Council of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan held a special ceremony to honour some of the region's most respected elders. These distinguished individuals—symbols of wisdom, resilience, and lifelong service—were formally recognised for their contributions to society.

The event, organised as part of the party's broader commitment to social respect and intergenerational solidarity, celebrated the moral authority and civic legacy of our most honourable seniors. Party representatives expressed their deep appreciation by presenting tokens of recognition and extending warm congratulations.

This meaningful occasion highlighted the PDPU's dedication to promoting a culture that values experience, honours age, and upholds national traditions rooted in respect for elders. By giving attention to the generation that has guided and nurtured our society, the party continues to set a powerful example of gratitude and social responsibility.

In May 2025, the "World of Dreams" campaign for persons with disabilities was successfully held at the Erkin Vohidov Creative School in Margilan city. This event was recognised as one of the most exemplary and socially significant initiatives organised by the Fergana region.

During the campaign, creative works by individuals with disabilities were exhibited to the public. These artworks attracted great interest from art enthusiasts and were also auctioned off. This not only helped support the talents of the creators but also contributed to increasing their social engagement.

This exemplary initiative, carried out by the collective efforts of the Fergana regional team, plays a vital role in promoting social inclusivity, protecting the rights of persons with disabilities, and strengthening their position within society. In May 2025, the Fergana Regional Council convened the inaugural mid-year reporting meeting of the "Active Youth Public Council," a key platform dedicated to fostering youth engagement and leadership within the region. This significant gathering not only provided an opportunity to review the council's achievements over the past six months but also marked the election of new direction managers who were formally entrusted with certificates of confidence, symbolising the trust and responsibility vested in them.

The "Active Youth Public Council" serves as a vital mechanism for empowering young people, encouraging their active participation in social, political, and community affairs. By recognising and awarding the most dedicated and impactful young members, the council reinforces the values of civic responsibility and proactive leadership. This initiative greatly contributes to nurturing a new generation of socially conscious and motivated citizens, who play a crucial role in driving positive change in Fergana and beyond.

Through sustained efforts and strategic support, the Fergana Regional Council's commitment to youth development not only enhances the council's prestige but also strengthens the broader framework for inclusive governance and participatory democracy in Uzbekistan.

In collaboration with the Fergana Regional Council and the Quva District Council, a roundtable discussion on "Healthy Eating and Nutrition" was successfully organised for women. The event brought together a diverse group of participants, including Shohruhmirzo Qosimov, Head of the Youth and Women's Affairs Department, Masturakhon Sayfutdinova, Chairperson of the Quva District Council, medical doctors, nutrition specialists, and a wide representation of community members.

The discussion focused on raising awareness about the importance of balanced diets, nutritional health, and preventative care, particularly among women and youth. Expert speakers shared valuable insights into maintaining healthy lifestyles and addressed common nutritional challenges faced by the local population.

This collaborative initiative highlights the commitment of regional and district authorities to promoting public health education and empowering women through informed choices. By fostering dialogue among healthcare professionals, community leaders, and residents, the event contributed to strengthening community well-being and encouraging sustainable health practices across the region.

At the end of the month, deputies Dilbarxon Mamajonova and Shokirjon Axmedov from the Legislative Chamber of the Oliy Majlis visited Toshloq district. In close cooperation with the Fergana Regional Council, they conducted a thorough assessment of pressing community issues. Demonstrating genuine compassion and dedication, the deputies engaged directly with residents, listening attentively to their concerns and challenges.

Their hands-on approach and sincere commitment to improving the lives of their constituents highlight their reputation as devoted public servants. By fostering open dialogue and collaborating closely with local authorities, they ensure that community voices are effectively represented in the legislative process. This visit exemplifies the deputies' proactive role in addressing regional needs and advancing socio-economic development through responsive and empathetic governance.

Conclusion:

The Rising Role of the Fergana Regional Council within the PDPU Structure

The Fergana Regional Council of the People's Democratic Party of Uzbekistan has emerged as one of the most dynamic and forward-looking branches of the party nationwide. Through consistent dedication to high-quality programming and community-centred initiatives, the Council is positioning itself as a model of excellence within the party's broader organisational framework.

A distinguishing feature of the Fergana Council's success lies in the elevated standard of its events and campaigns, which are not only well-organised but also socially impactful and inclusive. From initiatives focused on the empowerment of women and youth to targeted support for vulnerable populations, the Council has consistently demonstrated a capacity to deliver meaningful results.

One of the most notable achievements of the Fergana Council is its sustained growth in party membership, which continues to reflect strong public trust and engagement. Particularly encouraging is the increasing involvement of young people, who are not only joining the party in greater numbers but also actively contributing to its mission through leadership roles and grassroots activities.

The Council's strong partnerships with local government bodies, civil society, and the national parliament reinforce its ability to represent community interests effectively. Its integrated approach to policy advocacy, social development, and political education positions Fergana as a leading force within the PDPU and a critical contributor to the democratisation process in Uzbekistan.

In sum, the Fergana Regional Council is not only striving to become the most active and effective branch of the PDPU in the country—it is already setting the benchmark in organisational vitality, public engagement, and strategic vision.
