Abstract

This article analyzes the importance, methods, and results of educating youth in the spirit of military patriotism. During the study, an analysis of the literature, surveys, and observations were conducted. The results show that it is necessary to carry out systematic work in preschool, school, and higher educational institutions to educate young people in the spirit of patriotism. In conclusion, a comprehensive approach to youth education plays an important role in ensuring the development and security of our country.

Keywords: Military-patriotic education, youth, educational institutions, national values, defense of the Motherland.

Introduction

The feeling of patriotism is formed in the heart of every person from a young age. Therefore, educating young people in the spirit of military patriotism is one of the urgent tasks of today. Especially in an era of globalization and the acceleration of information flows, this issue is becoming even more important[1]. It is the duty of all of us to educate our youth on the basis of national and universal values, to form in their hearts feelings of love and devotion to the Motherland [2]. The purpose of this article is to analyze the significance, methods, and results of educating youth in the spirit of military patriotism. During the study, a literature review, questionnaires, and observations were conducted.

Analysis of Methods and Literature

The study analyzed scientific articles, dissertations, monographs, and statistical data. Interviews were also held with teachers and educators working in preschool educational institutions, general education schools, and higher educational institutions. Analysis of the literature shows that the issue of educating youth in the military-patriotic spirit has been studied by many researchers [3;4;5]. In particular, A.A. Kuchkarov in his dissertation researched the pedagogical foundations of forming a sense of patriotism in young people [6]. U.N. Nishonaliyev studied the issues of spiritual and moral education of military personnel [7]. However, research shows that systematic work on the military-patriotic education of youth has not been carried out at the proper level. That is why this issue remains relevant. The following methods were used for analysis in the article:

Study of documents and lesson plans on military-patriotic education of youth in preschool educational institutions, general education schools and higher educational institutions;

Conducting interviews with teachers and educators;

Conducting surveys among young people.

Results

The results obtained during the study are as follows: Military-patriotic education in preschool educational institutions is carried out mainly through national values, stories about national heroes and commanders, poems and songs on the theme of patriotism. Instilling a sense of patriotism in children from an early age and awakening a sense of patriotism in their hearts is an important part of upbringing. Special attention is paid to military-patriotic education in general education schools. Students are taught subjects such as "Sense of Homeland," "National Ideology of Independence," and "Fundamentals of Spirituality." During extracurricular activities, meetings are organized with labor heroes, veterans of the Second World War, and military personnel. Military-sports competitions such as "Shunqorlar," "Alpomish," and "Tomaris" are also held regularly [8]. Military-patriotic education in higher educational institutions will be carried out on an even wider scale. Students study subjects such as "National Idea," "Military Education," "Youth and Politics." In order to prepare students for the defense of the Motherland, special courses and training sessions are organized. The activities of military departments are also important in this regard. In the conducted surveys, it was revealed that the majority of young people (78%) understand the importance of military-patriotic education and have knowledge and skills in this area. They expressed their readiness to serve for the prosperity and security of the Motherland.

Analysis and Discussion

The research results show that certain work is being carried out in educational institutions to educate young people in the spirit of military patriotism. In particular, special subjects are taught in accordance with state educational standards, and extracurricular activities are organized. However, it is necessary to further improve this activity and increase its effectiveness. In particular, military-patriotic education should be carried out systematically and continuously [9]. That is, this process should continue organically from preschool educational institutions to higher educational institutions. Upbringing is multifaceted, and it is necessary not only to instill the national idea and ideology, but also to pay attention to the physical and spiritual development of young people. In addition, it is necessary to strengthen cooperation with family, mahalla, and public institutions in educating young people in the spirit of patriotism. After all, patriotism should be the foundation of educational activities not only in educational institutions, but also in all segments of society.

Conclusion

In conclusion, educating youth in the spirit of military patriotism is one of the most pressing tasks of today. In this regard, it is necessary to further improve the work carried out in educational institutions, to educate young people as selfless people ready to defend the Motherland. The research results show that the formation of a system of military-patriotic education, the continuous and integrated conduct of this activity, and the education of youth in the spirit of national and universal values, including the ideas of patriotism, are of great importance. By educating our youth in this spirit, we contribute to the prosperity and security of our country.
